TOBACCO FARMERS TURN TO DAIRYING

Grade C milk production may not be the top money-making business on the farm—but it is giving a boost to some burley tobacco growers in southwest Virginia where allotments have been cut to the point that tobacco won't support the family.

Dr. Ralph G. Kline, associate agricultural economist at VPI, points out that the production and sale of burley has been the chief source of income for many farm families in southwest Virginia. Acreage allotments have created a real problem for some of them. Many have turned to Grade C dairying.

Dr. Kline says the investment is low compared to that needed for Grade A milk production. The cows can use, in the form of pasture, land not suited to crop production. The cattle produce large amounts of manure which in turn can be used to maintain and improve the yields of burley.

Whether or not the Grade C milk enterprise can provide the added income needed on burley tobacco farms has been a question of interest to economists at VPI.

The Agricultural Experiment Station collected extensive records on 23 farms in Washington and Smythe Counties where both burley and Grade C milk were produced. The economists determined the net profit for labor and management for the dairy enterprise on each farm.

The 23 farms were divided into three groups according to the returns per cow to labor and management. The 7 most profitable showed a net profit from the dairy enterprise of $104 per milk cow after deducting all expenses for crops and pastures, feed bought, miscellaneous dairy items, and 4 per cent interest on the investment in land, buildings, and livestock. In contrast, the 7 least profitable farms showed a net loss of $22 per cow.

What accounts for the great difference?

Dr. Kline says the gross receipts per cow were $273 on the 7 most profitable farms, compared to $213 per milk cow on the 7 least profitable farms. Milk production per cow was 7,000 pounds on the most profitable farms, and only 5,849 pounds on least profitable farms.

The value of veal sold, and the increase in inventory was $20 more per cow on the most profitable farms.

The 7 least profitable farms spent $57 more per cow. They spent more for pasture, and for seed, and fertilizers for harvested forage. On the most profitable farms 39 per cent of the harvested forage was alfalfa and 10 per cent was small grain hay; while on the least profitable farms only 17 per cent of the harvested forage was alfalfa, and 24 per cent was small grain hay. The annual production cost of small grain hay is high compared to alfalfa.

BANK NOTES ..... by Malcolm

"Strength for These Days"
The Bible
Remember not the sins of my youth, nor my transgressions; according to Thy mercy, remember Thou me for Thy goodness' sake, O Lord. —(Psalm 25:7)
• Some of us find it difficult to forgive ourselves for the thoughtless or willful sins of our younger days, and a feeling of guilt lies like a stone on our hearts through the long years. But Our Father, through Christ Jesus, forgives us when we are truly repentant; we should then forgive ourselves.
